Course Description

This is a graduate-level course meant to provide students with a broad overview of the field of international relations and to prepare them for the field's comprehensive examination. Each week, we will examine a different topic within the IR literature. The literature that we survey will include both foundational and more recent works, and will take a variety of theoretical and methodological approaches.

The course has three primary objectives. First, by the semester's end, students should be broadly familiar with the IR canon, and should have a general understanding of the important questions that have motivated scholars in the past and that drive them today. Second, students will critically analyze a wide variety of published research, and will learn to understand and critique international relations literature. Finally, they will learn to identify theoretical and methodological trends, and will gain an understanding of how they can situate their own research within the literature.

Grading Policies

Final grades will be based on four components: class participation, weekly response papers, a final exam, and a research design project:

- Class participation (15%): As a survey course, this class carries with it a very heavy reading load. Students are expected not only to read all of the assigned readings, but to do so carefully, and to come prepared to discuss them. The key to success in any seminar is thoughtful reading and discussion, and class participation (both quantity and quality) is a crucial component of the final grade. Students are expected to attend every class and to participate actively. I will call on students who are not participating. Additionally, poor attendance can and will result in a reduced final grade.
- Six response papers (15%): Students are expected to write short papers (not more than two pages), critiquing the week's readings at least six times during the semester. Students may choose which weeks to cover, but a given week's response paper is due no later than Wednesday at 1:00 PM of the relevant week. Late papers will not be accepted. If students opt to write more than six response papers, I will drop the lowest grades. Note that these response papers should be critical and analytical in nature, should tie the readings together, and should not simply be summaries of the readings.

- Final exam (35%): This will be take-home exam to be completed during the week of final exams. The final is meant to be a practice comprehensive exam, and its format and style will reflect this.
- Research design project (35%): Learning to do original research is a key component of graduate training. During the course, students will identify a research question and build a project around it. At the end of the semester, students will turn in a short research design essay, which will effectively comprise the “front end” of a larger paper. This should include an introduction, literature review, and the development of a theoretical argument. While students are not expected to conduct an analysis, the paper should discuss the methods (and, if appropriate, data) that would be used to analyze the research question. A few weeks into the semester, I will ask students to submit some possible ideas and will offer feedback. The final paper is due before class on our last meeting (December 2). Unless cleared with the instructor in advance, late work will be penalized 10% per day.

Computer Problems

Hard drive crashes and fried motherboards are almost inevitable. In all likelihood, you will experience these problems at least once in your careers. But dead laptops and bricked hard drives are no longer the problems that they once were. Since this class involves outside work that you'll be doing on home computer, I expect you to maintain backups of your work. If you don't already have an account with a cloud storage and syncing service, let me recommend Dropbox (<http://www.dropbox.com/>) or Google Drive (<http://www.google.com/drive/>). Using one of these (or a similar service) to back up your work will ensure that you will have access to it even in the event of a crash. Let me stress once more: “my computer died just before I was going to turn in my assignment” is no longer a valid excuse.

UH CAPS Statement

Counseling and Psychological Services (CAPS) can help students who are having difficulties managing stress, adjusting to the demands of a professional program, or feeling sad and hopeless. You can reach CAPS (<http://www.uh.edu/caps>) by calling 713-743-5454 during and after business hours for routine appointments or if you or someone you know is in crisis. No appointment is necessary for the “Let's Talk” program, a drop-in consultation service at convenient locations and hours around campus. http://www.uh.edu/caps/outreach/lets\_talk.html

Readings

To reiterate the above, students should be aware that this is a course with a heavy reading load, and that there exists an expectation that every student will do every reading carefully. Most readings will be journal articles, and can be located easily through JSTOR or Google Scholar. I will make book chapters and those articles to which UH does not have access available through Blackboard.

When doing the reading, try to keep the following six questions in mind:

1. What is the central question?
2. What is the central answer?
3. What are the competing explanations?
4. Why are they wrong?
5. Does the research design match the theory?
6. How could this be improved?

Academic Honesty

All University of Houston students are expected to adhere to the rules and spirit of the school's policies on academic honesty, which are detailed in the Student Handbook and posted online. In this course, although it is certainly acceptable for students to study together and to work together on homework assignments, all write-ups should be completed independently. The course requires a written research paper and students should be especially careful to understand what constitutes plagiarism and to avoid it. To avoid any ambiguities, students should see the section on "Academic Honesty" in the Student Handbook for a full statement regarding UH's rules against cheating and plagiarism (<http://catalog.uh.edu/content.php?catoid=6&navoid=1025>). Violation of the university's policy on academic honesty in an assignment or activity will almost invariably result in a failing grade, and may result in expulsion from the university.

Students with Disabilities

The University of Houston System complies with Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 and the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, pertaining to the provision of reasonable academic adjustments/auxiliary aids for students who have a disability. In accordance with Section 504 and ADA guidelines, the Student Accessibility Center strives to provide reasonable academic adjustments/auxiliary aids to students who request and require them. If you believe that you have a disability requiring an academic adjustments/auxiliary aid, please call the Justin Dart, Jr. Student Accessibility Center at (713) 743-5400 or email them at JDCenter@central.uh.edu.

Syllabus Changes

Due to the changing nature of the COVID-19 pandemic, please note that the instructor may need to make modifications to the course syllabus and may do so at any time. Notice of such changes will be announced as quickly as possible through email, and modified syllabi will appear on the class Blackboard website.
